Gulf Shore to Jersey Shore

As I sit here, watching the cursor blink at me ambivalently, I'm thinking of all of the farewell editorials I've read in the Southern Flyer. They all tend to reflect on a long time spent with the family of the 908th and the enduring memories of a major part of someone's life spent working here.

The truth is, the camaraderie, longevity and continued sense of purpose do make this wing like a huge family.

That makes me the foster child.

I'm not from here – I grew up in California thinking the South was one big Hazard County and a hush puppy was a shoe. I wasn't invited to come – I was management reassigned from 22nd Air Force Headquarters (we're here to help). I haven't even been a TAC airlifter my whole life.

I was such an outsider when I got to the doorstep, I couldn't spell SEC.

I haven't been here long. As I think about the messages from members who have been here 15 or 20 or more years my four-year stint is paltry in comparison. What makes this place special is that none of that mattered. It's a testimony to the character of the people in the wing that I was welcomed into your family and never made to feel that I was ever an outsider. That's a spirit of teamwork and purpose that doesn't always exist.

It's one of the greatest strengths of the 908th because it's something that can't be ordered. It has to come from each individual and it has to be a way of life.

I will be going off to a new and exciting opportunity at the 514th Air Mobility Wing at Joint Base McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst, but I would not trade the experience I got here for anything in the world. I've worked for great commanders, had incredible peers and met some of the best people I will ever have the pleasure of working with.

Thank you for letting me be a part of your awesome family for a little while. I expect to continue hearing great things about you as I adjust to life in New Jersey.

Take Care,
KODO

CH. (MAJ.) DAVID DERSCH

"Service Before Self" is one of our core values, and a great way to practice putting others before yourself is to donate to a worthwhile charitable organization.

In the 51 years since President John F Kennedy began the Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) as a way for federal employees to make safe and reliable contributions, it has grown into the world's largest workplace charity drive. Millions have been raised, and the generosity of people like you has blessed countless folks.

Everyone from the wing is encouraged to participate. One of the great things about this year's campaign is that they are now accepting on-line credit card donations. Go to www.heartofalabama-cfc.org, click "pledge now" and then choose "CFC Nexus."

Be sure to give your donation under the 908 AW, found as a tenant unit under Air University. Our organizational code is 142. If you prefer to give cash or write a check, see your first sergeant or your group's key worker. Each group from the wing has one who can answer any questions you have.

During the month of November our nation pauses during the Thanksgiving Holiday to reflect with gratitude on the blessings we have received. Let's begin the month by each of us making a little gift to benefit someone else.

As we open our hearts generously now, we can be someone else's Thanksgiving blessing later!

TSP: The Five Funds

Information provided by 908th FM

Common Stock Index
Investment "C" Fund

Last month, we discussed the Thrift Savings Plan. Once military members are enrolled in TSP, they can divide TSP contributions among these five investment funds.

Government Securities
Investment "G" Fund

This fund is known for being the safest or least risky investment of the five funds since the only way it will lose money is by some catastrophic event, e.g., if the federal government defaults on its loans.

With low risk, usually comes a lower interest rate or rate of return. The G Fund invests in specially issued short-term, non-marketable U.S. Treasury securities.

Fixed Income Index
Investment "F" Fund

Essentially, the F Fund is a higher risk than the G Fund, but is still considered low-risk because it is spread over many generally stable investments. Even if a corporation were to declare bankruptcy, the loss would be minimal.

Depositing into the F Fund is an investment in the Barclays U.S. Debt Index Fund, which tracks the bond-market. A mathematical model determines the amount in which this fund distributes investor's money amongst the various types of U.S. government, mortgage-backed, corporate and foreign government sector securities.

Investing in this fund puts members in the thick of the "Standard & Poor's 500" companies. Through the Barclays Equity Index Fund, investors hold common stocks of all the companies within the S&P 500 index. C Fund invests in 500 of the largest companies in the U.S. and are considered the least risky as stock investing goes.

International Stock Index
Investment "I" Fund

Tracking the returns of the Morgan Stanley Capital International (Europe, Australia, and Far East) stock index, this fund provides coverage of stock markets in the 21 countries the index represents; this includes 915 companies, 23 industry groups within 10 economic sectors. Simply stated, it grows as the world market grows.

Small Capitalization Stock Index
Investment "S" Fund

While the S&P tracks 500 of the largest companies, this fund does just the opposite, with diversity being the key. It tracks small- and medium-sized companies through the Wilshire 4500 index.

Its medium is the Barclays Extended Market Index Fund, which buys stocks of those companies within the index that have market values more than $1 billion.

Posh honor for Posch

MXG's operations boss receives AFRC General Lew Allen Jr. Award

Story and photos
by Tech. Sgt. Jay Ponder
908th AW Public Affairs

During the past few years, the 908th Maintenance Group has covered itself with oil, grease and glory.

From individual maintainers to the group itself, the 908th MXG has earned a number of awards for excellence at the 22nd Air Force and Air Force Reserve Command levels. Recently, the group added another award to its long list of achievements with the selection of Maj. Daniel R. Posch, Operations Officer, 908th Maintenance Squadron as the recipient of the 2012 General Lew Allen Jr. Award for AFRC.

The honor is awarded annually to a base-level officer and senior NCO in the aircraft, munitions or missile maintenance fields directly involved in sortie generation.

Other duties considered included compliance with technical orders, deployments and following up with day-to-day operations.

Posch, who has been in the Air Force for 10 years and in the Reserve since 2006, explained that by competing with other units and winning the award, it enhances the credibility of the unit by showing the 908th Airlift Wing is an elite organization with the experience, competence and training to get the job done.

But the Cleveland native attributed his success to the members of the maintenance squadron. "It's not just a one-person thing," said Posch, "I may be the person whose name is on the award, but it's the airmen on the flight line who are turning the wrenches day in and day out."

Posch gave credit to several folks but most to Lt. Col. Joe Friday, commander of the 908th Maintenance Group, saying, "I have known Colonel Friday for more than five years and he definitely had a lot of influence over the leader I have become."

Posch talked about how humbling it was to win the award.

"This award was not so much a reflection on my work this last year but more of a reflection on our organization and the continuing excellence that goes on throughout this organization," he said. "Everyone comes in and gives 110 percent to make these planes the best in the 22nd Air Force and AFRC."

"The Lew Allen Award recognizes professionals who have excelled in their career fields and stood out among their peers," said Friday, who won the award himself in 2010. He said it signifies Posch has been recognized as 'tops' in the category of maintenance field-grade officer and pays tribute to Posch's management and leadership skills.

Friday wasn't the only one impressed with Posch's performance.

"Maj. Posch is without a doubt the finest maintenance officer I have ever served with," said Chief Master Sgt. Leon Alexander, "he is out there hand in hand with every single person. There is nothing he feels is beneath him in doing. Everybody recognizes it and that's why everyone works so hard for him. He's nothing short of phenomenal."

Posch explained that a big part of his maintainers' success comes down to how they prepare the planes from sorties for local training to generating a flight overseas to the AOR.

"It's a reflection of their work that goes into it," he said, describing the squadron as a tight group, "It's a team event here. It's a team organization where almost no one thing can be done by themselves."

The award package now advances forward to the Air Force level, but more important to Posch is how quickly and effectively maintainers ensure the 908th's airplanes are ready to fly on a moment's notice.

"If we had to launch all five of these airplanes in the next 12 hours, we would have all the planes in the air," he said. "Our phones are on 24/7, 365. We are ready to go no matter what is going on, no matter what the task, no matter what the calling, these planes are always going to be ready to go!"

"We take pride in that and exceeding the standards set by AFRC."

Thirty-five of Alabama's leading citizens, representing such fields as business, government, medicine, finance and education took time away from their busy schedules Oct. 4-5 to get an up-close look at Air Force Reserve personnel and equipment, as well as the future of American air power.

Invitees of the 2012 908th Airlift Wing Civic Leader Tour were taken for a tour of Naval Air Station Fort Worth Joint Reserve Base, as well as Lockheed-Martin Aviation facilities.

After experiencing flight aboard one of the 908th's C-130 Hercules aircraft, guests were given a mission brief at the 301st Fighter Wing before proceeding to Lockheed, where they watched the assembly process of the three variants of the F-35.

Other highlights included lunch at the base dining facility, a chance to experience simulations of C-130 flight and urban combat and static displays of weapons with the 610th Security Forces Squadron and briefs on explosive ordnance disposal equipment with the 301st Combat Engineering Squadron.

Guests also became familiar with life support parachute simulations and pilot survival gear, as well as some good 'ol Texas barbecue.

Chad Emerson said that the trip was valuable because it showed him "The incredible logistical intricacy all of the operations take. It is amazing to witness how all the distinct parts come together into a complete whole."

McGill 'achiefs' top enlisted rank

By Staff Sgt. Sandi Percival
908th Public Affairs

Aircraft Maintenance Squadron has a new chief. Michael Lynn McGill was promoted Oct. 1 after serving as a crew chief his entire career. A member of the 908th Airlift Wing since 1994, McGill has spent his whole career here at Maxwell.

"I love the 908th, and I'm not going anywhere," he said.

With five deployments under his belt and a history of hard work and dedication, McGill was a shoo-in for the position.

"It has been an absolute pleasure to work with Mike," said Lt. Col. Joe Friday, commander of the 908th Maintenance Group. "I know he'll do a great job in this capacity and I look forward to working with him in the future."

McGill said he has a hands-on approach to leadership and an open-door policy.

"I want to make sure the airmen have the training they need to succeed so we can be the best C-130 unit in the command," he said.

Knowing it takes a lot of hard work and long hours to reach the most senior enlisted rank, McGill encourages Airmen to complete their professional military education.

"As a young airman, I never thought I'd even make it to master sergeant," he said. "If I can do it, anyone can do it."

Details, fitness, suicide top enlisted call topics

By Staff Sgt. Sandi Percival
908th Public Affairs

Chief Master Sgt. Owen Duke, Command Chief Master Sgt. of the 908th Airlift Wing, held an enlisted call following the commander's call during the October Unit Training Assembly.

One of Duke's priorities is attention to detail, and he cautioned airmen and NCOs that their attention to detail could one day save their lives.

"This is a dangerous business," said Duke.

Chief Duke briefed airmen on the importance of suicide awareness and prevention, and he offered to personally hug any airmen in need of a pick-me-up. All jokes aside, last year the Air Force saw a spike in suicide rates, and Duke said he takes prevention and awareness measures very seriously.

Duke thanked airmen for the recent increase in fitness scores, cautioned airmen about their use of social media, and welcomed our Civil Engineer Squadron members home from their recent deployment to Afghanistan.

TO PRESERVE, PROTECT & DEFEND

Forty-eight young men and women who have been preparing to enter Basic Military Training took the oath of enlistment during the October Commander's Call. They were welcomed by a thunderous applause upon taking the oath by members of the wing. Right, Col. Brett Clark, commander of the 908th Airlift Wing, gives the oath. "This group also does numerous off duty projects such as Habitat for Humanity." Rogers was initially nominated by Chief Master Sgt. Leon Alexander.

SANTA CLAUS IS COMIN TO TOWN!

Bells will be ringin' during the December UTA, as Santa Claus will make his annual visit to the 908th Airlift Wing on Dec. 1 at approximately 10 a.m. Make plans to bring your children to meet Santa and have their photo taken with him! Volunteers are needed to assist, so if you want to help out, call the Public Affairs Office at 953-6804 or 7874.
